

'No Bones' In Corsetry

To get an inkling of what you will be seeing in your favorite corset department this spring, you have only to look at the current trends in ready-to-wear, for undergarments this season have been designed with an eye to emphasizing the popular looks for Spring, 1962.

You'll note that figure interest in the newest fashions centers on the tiny waist, set off by billowing skirts and wide, wide belts.

Agent Pens Top Seller

The FBI is turning out writers as well as some of the country's top governors, district attorneys and law enforcement officers.

Several are on the best selling lists. Ex-FBI agent Gordon Gordon, who with his wife Mildred, has written 10 suspense novels under the pseudonym of "The Gordons," became a best selling author automatically this week when Bantam Books brought out a 500,000-copy printing of "Experiment in Terror."

Librarian Shares His Love of Books

Who says there's no chance these days for a young man to find a "wide-open" field of endeavor?

Look at Harold Umbarger of 805 Felbar Ave. One minute he's graduating from library school, and almost the next time you look he's the Torrance branch librarian for Los Angeles County, administering four libraries and another one on the way.

Umbarger, 32, was graduated from USC Library School in 1959 and joined the county library system. The fast-expanding organization was able to put his talents to use, and he has charge of the Torrance, El Retiro, Walteria, and North Torrance branches of the system.

ANOTHER BRANCH, the Isabel Henderson unit in West Torrance, will open late this year.

Umbarger, who is married and has a year-old daughter, is a good example of what Librarians Associated, a group of professional librarians, is talking about when it says the field of librarianship is one for people "on the way up."

The group is booming a drive during National Library Week, April 8-14, to persuade college youth to take up librarianship as a career.

"YOU CAN'T say that a person is a good librarian through love of books alone," points out Umbarger. "You must also want to share your love of books with others, to help others get the best out of books and to use them as an aid and inspiration in their daily lives."

"It's only in this way the librarian can be a vital force in bringing people and books together."

Umbarger was graduated from a Maryland high school in 1947, studied French literature at the University of Pennsylvania, then took his master's degree in library science at USC in 1959.

HE ALSO found time to put in two years with the Marine Corps.

Miss Katherine Grant, acting chairman of Librarians Associated, echoes Umbarger when she points to librarianship as an "uncrowded field."

Here are some other benefits she lists:

"You can choose your locale at home or abroad, you select your own specialty, you choose the age group you like best, and you grow with your job."

TRAVEL opportunities are available outside the United States with armed forces and State Department libraries," she says. And there are positions not only with public systems, but with private industries as well, many of which are building up large libraries of important research materials.

"Librarians are important community leaders," Miss Grant points out. "They are active in public relations programs and participate in civic organizations, discussion groups, film forums and radio and television programs."

"THEY PREPARE exhibits, write publicity articles and book reviews for newspapers, and use other means to bring library resources to public attention.

"Intelligent, enthusiastic and dedicated men and women who enjoy working with people and books are needed."

A beginning librarian in the county system earns from $464 to $575 a month. The chief county librarian makes $18,480 a year, while chief librarians in small cities in the Southland earn from $10,000 to $11,000 a year.
